When Mojave, the new version of MacOS, launched in September 2018 it brought a collection of new desktop wallpapers that show a Mojave desert sand-dune as it changes throughout a 24-hour period.. One of the few features was the introduction of a dark mode which is basically a system-wide dark theme.. Time-based wallpapers aren't exactly new on Linux but Apple has taken the idea to a whole new level.. This is purely a visual feature but if you're someone who easily loses track of time, it might even be helpful.. Today it is Linux that we'll try to bring this feature on This is possible due to Twitter user Thanh Trần who shared a bespoke GTK background slideshow that he created.. We've already shown you how you can get macOS Mojave dynamic wallpaper feature on your Windows PC.. This is basically a wallpaper of the Mojave desert, or more accurately several wallpapers.. Now we've had dark themes on Linux since forever but if you dig that macOS look there is also the macOS Mojave GTK theme which includes both light and dark themes.. The OS is pretty much a 'bugs and fixes' update though it does bring some new eye candy and a few helpful features.. Download the macOS Mojave wallpaper pack and unzip the archive to a location of choice. 6e4e936fe3 Mera dil badal de full naat mp3 download
